Victim Offender Mediations provide a unique opportunity for a victim of an offence to meet face to face with the person who has caused them harm and negotiate an outcome which meets their needs for justice. As is the case with most things in life – good preparation is the key to success for participation in a victim offender mediation. This workshop looks at what needs to happen to provide the good preparation victims and offenders require to engage in a successful restorative justice encounter.

The workshop is targeted at practitioners who have attended the Professional Mediator Victim Offender Mediation (VOM) Certificate Course and builds on the information provided in that program as well as who are interested in Mediation. This practical workshop addresses the key components of pre-mediation preparation including: what mediators need to consider in engaging participants; who to engage with; what are the critical questions to ask; what is the critical information to give; and more.

The workshop is presented by experienced restorative justice practitioners Martin McMillan and Maryann Hearn from the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice at Griffith University.
